

LUNDY

Climbing Restrictions 2025

Hatched areas are closed 31 Mar – 14 Aug

Striped areas are closed 31 Mar – 15 Sep

Green areas are open year-round

See 'List of Restrictions' for complete breakdown

Lundy has long been celebrated for its breeding seabirds and the success of the Seabird Recovery Project cannot be overstated. Over 40,000 seabirds now breed across the island, and the importance of our thriving colonies are recognised at a national level. Puffins have recovered from near-extinction; only five birds were left in 2004, 20 years on and the population now sits at over 1,800 birds! Moreover, 95% of England's breeding Manx Shearwater population call this lump of granite home.

The Lundy climbing season is widely considered to span from mid-August to October. Restrictions apply during the seabird breeding season and are subject to constant review. As such, all visiting climbers are requested to contact the island warden on or before arrival during the restricted season.

All wild birds, their nests and eggs are protected by law (Wildlife & Countryside Act 1981). Please inform the warden at the first instance if a climb or access route encroaches within 100 metres of a nest.

Thank you for your continued cooperation, and good climbing!
