Our work

The Landmark Trust is one of Britain's leading building conservation charities. With the help of our supporters we save historic buildings in danger of being lost forever. We carefully restore such 'Landmarks' and give them a vibrant new life by making them available for holidays. The letting income supports their maintenance and future survival in our society, landscape and culture. Free open days enable access for thousands more.

"It is now twenty-three years since I became Patron and I am very proud of all that has been accomplished in that time. From important industrial buildings and military structures to historic cotton-weavers' cottages and domestic properties - Landmark's remarkable collection of properties is testament to the founder's truly original notion that extraordinary buildings could be saved for future generations and supported by the people who stay in them."

Buildings worth saving

The Landmark Trust was established in 1965 by John and Christian Smith who felt that small yet significant buildings were being lost forever; places that were important threads in the historic fabric of our nation. Since then the charity has rescued over 200 extraordinary buildings, from exuberant follies to fishermen's cottages to the creations of Palladio and Pugin.

These special places are frequently decaying when Landmark intervenes, but we believe they are absolutely worth saving. Our role in the preservation of heritage remains relevant: last year we were approached about over 150 buildings at risk or in need of a new future, more than ever before.

We take on two or three buildings a year, raising funds from generous supporters for each project. After detailed research we employ traditional craft skills to repair and restore each building.

People are often surprised by how affordable breaks in such memorable places can be. In fact, 65% of Landmarks can be rented at certain times of the year for less than £20 per person per night. Over 56,000 guests stayed in our buildings last year; each enjoying a personal, refreshing and fun experience. In Landmark's care these wonderful places will never again fall into disrepair.

A red letter year for Landmark

Our golden jubilee has been a year of celebration, participation and progress. Rescuing and repairing buildings remains the life blood of what we do, and in 2015 we opened three new Landmarks with the help of our supporters:

Hougoumont farm on the battlefield of Waterloo, just in time for the bicentenary of the battle, Belmont House in Lyme Regis and St Edward's Presbytery in Ramsgate. Each of these has in its way been pulled back from decay or dereliction and is now secure for centuries to come.

But more than bricks and mortar, 2015 has been overwhelmingly about people, a record-breaking year in which more people have stayed in, visited and experienced Landmarks than ever before. LAND, our pan-British sculpture installation by Antony Gormley, brought a whole new audience to Landmark, as did the wonderful 'Anthem for Landmark' choral project, now nominated for a Royal Philharmonic Society Music award. Our buildings were 85% full in 2015, more popular than they have ever been, and 9 million people saw the craftsmanship and expertise that underpins our work through the Channel 4 series 'Restoring Britain's Landmarks'. Meanwhile the average cost per person per night of our buildings remains well under £50, and hundreds of people most in need of rest have experienced the joy and inspiration of our places through the '50 For Free' scheme.

Landmark exists to save buildings and to further people's enjoyment of historic places. That we have been able to do both in spades this birthday year is a tribute to how much these causes matter to everyone, and proof of how important it is that our work continues as we enter our next half century.

Dr Anna Keay, Director

Our Golden Year

JANUARY

Revival of Pugin's legacy

Our year began on site in Ramsgate at St. Edward's Presbytery built by A W N Pugin. We spent the year tackling disrepair and recovering its original form, including the huge oriel window that once lit E W Pugin's studio. Our rescue of this Grade I listed building removed it from the Heritage at Risk Register and was funded by donations from supporters and a legacy from the late Mrs Shelagh Preston. Our first guest was Father Marcus Holden, the Priest of St Augustine's Catholic Church next door, whose predecessor the Presbytery was originally built to accommodate.

FEBRUARY

Pioneering new scheme

The Landmark Pioneers scheme was launched, a new fundraising scheme which allows us to tackle the initial, risky stages of building rescues to assess the feasibility of a project. A group of potential Pioneers joined us at 50 Albemarle Street in London - an almost unaltered Georgian townhouse where the publisher John Murray entertained his authors, some of whom were pioneers in their own right including Charles Darwin and Jane Austen.

MARCH

Fifty free charity breaks

Now in its third year, our 50 For Free Scheme reaches people who would most benefit from a restorative break at a Landmark but may not be able to afford one. Charities from all over the country, particularly grassroots organisations, enjoyed free holidays at buildings such as Alton Station, the Egyptian House and Tixall Gatehouse. The cost was met by a generous private donor. Some of the beneficiaries included Action for Asperger's, Cancer Lifeline South West and Young Carers Together.

LAND by Antony Gormley

Thanks to a private donor, Antony Gormley designed five sculptures to celebrate the special relationship between people, places and time that the Landmark Trust has embodied for the past five decades. The life-sized cast iron sculptures, together called LAND, reflected the individuality of each location at Martello Tower, Clavell Tower, Lengthsman's Cottage, Saddell Bay and on the south-west tip of Lundy.

MAY

A Golden Weekend

Our 50th anniversary year was officially launched during a magnificent Golden Weekend. Ninety-five per cent of the population were within 50 miles of one of our 25 open buildings and 15,494 visitors joined us to celebrate. Over 700 musicians – from community choirs, bell ringers and Brownies – simultaneously performed their own interpretations of a specially-commissioned Anthem for Landmark by award-winning composer Kerry Andrew.

JUNE

A Royal Visit to Hougoumont

A new Landmark, Hougoumont, opened in time for the Bicentenary of the Battle of Waterloo on 18th June. Our Patron The Prince of Wales and The Duchess of Cornwall called in for tea during the wider commemorations and admired the restoration work. In their footsteps came 2,685 people on the public open days at this important location where the course of European history changed forever.

Writers in Warwickshire Festival

Hundreds of people visited Astley Castle for the inaugural Writers in Warwickshire Festival. It was a celebration of local literary talent, with performances of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, poetry readings and extracts from George Eliot's The Mill on the Floss.

JULY

Life-saving news for Llwyn Celyn

The Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) awarded us a £2.525 million grant to rescue Llwyn Celyn, a rare but deteriorating late 15th-century building in the Black Mountains within the Brecon Beacons National Park. Together with the £1.7million raised from our own supporters we will be able to restore the main house to create a new Landmark and repair outbuildings for use by the local community and general public as education and interpretation centres. Work starts in April 2016.

Lundy Beacon restored

The Old Lighthouse on Lundy became obsolete in 1898 and eventually became derelict. We have been working to restore it for several decades. Thanks to a generous legacy and aided by donations, the dilapidated roof and curved Georgian window of the lower lantern room are now restored.

AUGUST

'Landmark: A History of Britain in 50 Buildings'

Copies of a striking book by Anna Keay and our Historian Caroline Stanford went on sale. With a foreword by our Ambassador Griff Rhys Jones, Landmark's pioneering work was catalogued for the first time. Anna and Caroline highlighted 50 buildings to narrate Britain's social, political and economic past whilst tracing the charity's evolution. The launch was accompanied by a sell-out lecture to supporters at the Royal Institute of British Architects.

SEPTEMBER

Record-breaking open days

Nine of our Landmarks opened their doors free to the public for Heritage Open Days, contributing to Landmark's 104 open days during 2015. In total 27,150 people joined us to explore the buildings and their stories and restorations, breaking all previous Landmark records.

Keeping craft skills alive

We hosted five Craft Apprentices from The Prince's Foundation for Building Community: Joel Hume, Andy Bolton, Sarah (Goss) Ashworth, Andy Thompson and James Harding-Rogers. They gained experience with our in-house craft team at Wormington and worked onsite at Belmont. William Barkley became our first Craft Trainee following a generous donation from a Landmark Patron.

OCTOBER

Belmont opens after two years on site

Belmont in Lyme Regis opened to guests. The Grade II* listed 18th-century seaside villa was the home of Eleanor Coade (1733-1821) and author John Fowles (1926-2005). Its repair and restoration was a meticulous process encompassing documentary research and traditional craft skills, working with volunteers, local firms and specialists from the South West. We created a permanent exhibition for the public in the former stables, open free on Friday afternoons from April to October.

NOVEMBER

Channel 4 TV series

'Restoring Britain's Landmarks' was broadcast on Channel 4. The six-part series focused on our major projects and shone a light on what it takes to save a building at risk. Over a million people tuned in on Wednesday evenings to share what we do, including the careful conservation and ongoing maintenance of buildings such as Danescombe Mine, the Music Room and the Martello Tower.

Puffin Project success

Lundy means 'Puffin island' in old Norse and today the etymology is even more relevant. After a drastic decline in the last century we noted more than 300 individual puffins in 2015, up from 80 in 2013.

DECEMBER

An appeal for Coed y Bleiddiau

The year ended as busy as it began, with a £400,000 fundraising appeal for Coed y Bleiddiau. This small but charming Grade II listed building is at risk in the Snowdonia National Park. It was built for the Superintendent of the Ffestiniog Steam Railway which took slate from the quarries down to the harbour. Accessible on foot and by steam train only, we hope to start work in summer 2016.

Georgian Group recognition

The Duke of Wellington presented the Georgian Group's 2015 award for Restoration of a Georgian Building in an Urban Setting to the Belmont restoration team and said "The project has been informed by meticulous building analysis and documentary research and the building is now again a thing of real beauty, a delightful monument to one of the great female entrepreneurs of the Georgian period."
